

SANTAREM, PORTUGAL 1266

There was a woman in Santarém whose husband was being unfaithful to her. She was distressed by this and decided to ask a sorceress for help who advised her to go to steal a consecrated Host in order to make a love potion from it. So the woman went to Mass at the Church of St. Stephen. When she received the Eucharist on her tongue, she removed it and wrapped it in her veil to bring to the sorceress. Before the woman had even left the church, the host started bleeding. Confused, she went home and placed the host in a trunk. During the night, beams of light radiated from the trunk. She repented for what she had done and confessed to her priest the next morning. The priest retrieved the host and brought it back to the church in solemn procession. The Host continued to bleed for three consecutive days. The relic of this miracle is preserved to this day in the church, which is now called the church of the Holy Miracle.
